LEAH KIRBY is married to Cambridge instructor Van Cannon Kirby. Leah is a full-time wife and mother. She and Cannon have three children, Fern (5½), Lyla Jane (4), and Finn (2). In September Leah will begin a formal home-school education based primarily on the methods of Charlotte Mason, an English educational reformer of the late 19th century. Before having children Leah was the Education Coordinator for the Polk Museum of Art and she taught 7th grade at Geneva Classical Academy, helping them found a theatre department. Leah attended Covenant College and the University of South Florida studying English Literature, Theatre, and Education. Leah says that completion of the Cambridge Thoughts Captive curriculum is the highlight of her educational career and she credits her intellectual and educational awakening to time spent in Cambridge classes. She now leads the Cambridge Study Center Book Club and is occasionally called upon to lead Cambridge Film Night or discussion in a Cambridge class. She also teaches for Covenant Church women's ministry. Leah's extra pursuits include community theatre, reading, exercise, cooking and the study of educational methods and philosophies.
